In times of rapid technological advancement, evolving societal needs, and shifting educational paradigms, it is crucial to rethink the traditional models of teaching and learning and reimagine how we educate the next generation. Hence, 6th Education Across Borders Conference 2025 (EABC): Reimagining Education in the Modern Age (REMA) encourages contributions which discuss and explore new pathways for educators, institutions, and policymakers to ensure learners are not only fully equipped with knowledge but also with the skills needed to thrive in this dynamic and ever-changing world.

During the plenary speeches and conference sessions, we expect insightful and fruitful discussions on a wide range of topics, including:

- Redefining curricula for future skills: What should modern curricula look like to prepare students for an increasingly digital and interconnected world? What are the essential skills beyond technical knowledge, such as critical thinking, creativity, and emotional intelligence?
- Modernizing teaching methods: How can traditional teaching practices be adapted to meet the needs of contemporary learners? What innovative pedagogical strategies, such as integrating digital tools, flipped classrooms, and adaptive learning platforms, can foster active learning, enhance student engagement, and develop essential skills like critical thinking and creativity?

- Inclusive and equitable education models: How can we ensure that advancements in education reach all learners, regardless of their personal abilities and characteristics and socio-economic background or geographic location?
- The role of technology in education: How can AI, virtual learning environments, and adaptive learning platforms personalize education and make it more accessible?
- Lifelong learning and continuous education: As the nature of work and career paths evolve, how do we foster a culture of lifelong learning? How can educational institutions support reskilling and upskilling throughout one's life?
- The role of educators in a tech-driven world: How will the role of teachers shift in this new landscape, and how can they receive better support in adapting to these changes?

These are just a few of the important education-related issues the conference will focus on, and we look forward to hearing and sharing invaluable insights, experiences, and solutions by researchers and scholars as we work together to reimagine education for the modern age.
